PPAP Production Part Approval Process

PPAP (Production Part Approval Process) is a process used to ensure that a manufacturer's production process is capable of producing parts that meet the customer's requirements. It is a key component of the automotive industry's quality management system. The process involves a series of steps, including design review, process validation, and production approval. The AIAG (Automotive Industry Action Group) FMEA Manual 5th Edition provides detailed guidance on how to implement PPAP effectively. The manual covers the entire process, from initial design to final production approval. It includes information on how to identify potential failure modes and their causes, how to evaluate the risk of failure, and how to develop and implement control plans to prevent failure. The manual also provides information on how to document the PPAP process and how to maintain records of the process. The AIAG FMEA Manual 5th Edition is a valuable resource for anyone involved in the automotive industry's quality management system. It is a comprehensive guide to the PPAP process, and it provides the information needed to ensure that a manufacturer's production process is capable of producing parts that meet the customer's requirements. The manual is available in PDF format, and it can be downloaded from the AIAG website.
