In mathematics, a unit vector in a normed vector space is a vector (often a spatial vector) of length 1. A unit vector is often denoted by a lowercase letter with a circumflex, or "hat":  $\hat{u}$  (pronounced "i-hat"). The term direction vector is used to describe a unit vector being used to represent spatial direction, and such quantities are commonly denoted as  $\mathbf{d}$ .

In analytic geometry, the direction cosines (or directional cosines) of a vector are the cosines of the angles between the vector and the three coordinate axes. Equivalently, they are the contributions of each component of the basis to a unit vector in that direction. Direction cosines are an analogous extension of the usual notion of slope to higher dimensions.

Il teorema della divergenza può essere usato per esprimere la divergenza in un sistema di coordinate curvilinee. Si consideri un riferimento sferico: ogni volta che si varia una coordinata di una quantità infinitesima viene percorso un arco di lunghezza opportuna. Al variare della distanza radiale si ha  $dr$ , al variare dell'angolo si ha  $r d\theta$  mentre al variare dell'angolo si ha  $r \sin\theta d\phi$ .
